Another June brings another Nautilus. In this, the 1938 volume we are attempting to bring to you the school year, just closed, in the terse, graphic style of the Stentorian, the weekly college newscast. In keeping with the times, for this is a picture age, we have depended largely upon that symbol of the current era, the camera, to tell its story, believing it to be just as eloquent as the printed word, and more accurate. Most college annuals serve their original purpose best many years after the ink has dried. That end will be doubly served when the old graduates can see the picture before them and not be called upon to reconstruct it from the inaccurate files of memory cued only by words.

To the Class of '36

It's been sweet to hear the music of your laughter,
To know the charm and friendship of your smile;
Though our busy paths may seldom cross hereafter,
It's been sweet to walk with you this wee short mile.

It's been good to hear the truth that you have spoken,
To meet you heart to heart, and soul to soul;
It's grand to feel your handclasp e'er broken
An honest motive and a worthy goal.

It's been sad if some of you have met sorrow
That changed your skies from peaceful blue to grey;
I pray that tranquil will be your tomorrow,
I love you for your calm brave yesterdays.

Because of cherished memories, I pen this little rhyme,
Dedicated to a class that's truest blue;
Forever I shall feel that you in part are mine,
For I've become a tiny bit of you.

WITH THE COMPLETION of every work there comes the acknowledgment of effort and cooperation. In the completion of a college annual, this acknowledgment takes the place of the flowers that are passed across the footlights to a deserving actress, or of the ovation that is given for a work well done.

Recorded below are the list of merchants who so generously donated their dollars to make the book possible. Generally speaking, they are the same as last year and their names will be found in other annuals, on programs, and behind any undertaking that is a civic asset to the community. In times of recession demands upon their generosity increase rather than decrease with income, but these business men still ring a "no sale" on the cash register for a worthwhile cause.

And, as adviser, for the group that this year brought out the Nautilus, may we spread a few orchids where they are deserved. First to Dortha Mae Fisher, who found that the job of editor carried no little grief and very little glory; to Gayle Johnson, to whom we are indebted for the chalk drawings, and some sound ideas; to Bill Staff, who handled the photography assignment in a professional manner; and finally to Leonard Bastin, and his fine business staff for raising the wherewithal to print the book.

JOHN FORBES.
